August 1st 2018: Going Green

What draws a person to the funeral industry and then to green burial? For Elizabeth Fournier, it was many early losses and a fascination with how people said goodbye. But it was her clients who inspired her to seek greener practices when it came to burial. Maybe we could be buried on our own land, or by the people who love us. Maybe a community could take control of the process and create it in a way that honors the person they've lost. And maybe this could lead to a revolution in the funeral industry! What is a green burial? Is it possible for all of us to have the kind of funeral and burial
