April 18th 2016: The Garage Sale Millionaire

When ten-year old Aaron LaPedis asked his Dad for new toys, he got a lesson in capital formation. Sell your old ones and reinvest the profit, his Dad said. So they had a garage sale with Aaron in charge. Receipts for the weekend were about $2000. With that starting capital, Aaron became a "treasure hunting entrepreneur." (Investors hedging high inflation by buying physical assets that appreciate with time, use the term collectibles.) By his late twenties, Aaron was a millionaire and nationally recognized authority. To this day, he will say that millions can be made with starting capit
